

IMPORTANT

NOTE

All rights reserved with the author. It is illegal to share this ebook in public (social media websites or online messaging platforms), anyone found doing so might face legal consequences.

The Ant and the Grasshopper

This story tells the tale of an ant that spends its summer gathering food for the winter while the grasshopper spends his time singing and dancing. When winter comes, the ant has plenty of food while the grasshopper has none. The moral of the story is that it's important to prepare for the future and not procrastinate.

edueuphoria.com

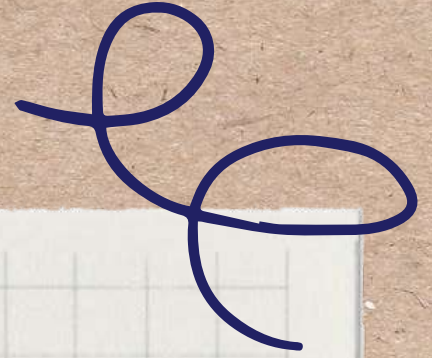

The Boy Who Cried Wolf

In this story, a boy repeatedly cries out "wolf" to trick the villagers into thinking that a wolf is attacking his flock of sheep. However, when a real wolf does come, the boy cries out for help but nobody believes him. The moral of the story is that honesty is the best policy, as lying will eventually lead to people not trusting you.

edueuphoria.com

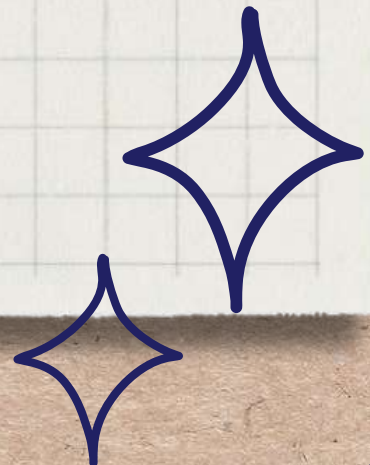

The Fox and the Crow

In this fable, a crow has a piece of cheese in its beak and a fox wants it. The fox flatters the crow, saying that she has a beautiful voice and should sing for him. The crow, pleased by the flattery, opens her beak to sing, and the cheese falls out, allowing the fox to take it. The moral of the story is not to fall for flattery, as it may be used to deceive you.

edueuphoria.com

The Tortoise and the Hare

This story tells the tale of a hare that challenges a tortoise to a race. The hare, confident in his speed, takes a nap halfway through the race, while the tortoise continues to move slowly and steadily towards the finish line, ultimately winning the race. The moral of the story is that slow and steady wins the race, and overconfidence can lead to failure.

edueuphoria.com

The Lion and the Mouse

In this tale, a lion spares a mouse's life, thinking it is too small to be of any use. Later, the mouse repays the lion's kindness by gnawing through the ropes of a trap that had caught the lion. The moral of the story is that even small acts of kindness can have great rewards.

edueuphoria.com

The Goose That Laid the Golden Eggs

This story tells of a farmer who owns a goose that lays golden eggs. The farmer becomes greedy and kills the goose, hoping to find all of the golden eggs at once. However, there are no golden eggs inside, and the farmer has lost his source of wealth. The moral of the story is not to be greedy and to appreciate what you have.

edueuphoria.com

The Wind and the Sun

This fable tells of a contest between the wind and the sun, with both trying to make a traveler remove his coat. The wind uses force and blows harder, but the traveler only clutches his coat tighter. The sun then shines warmly on the traveler, who eventually takes off his coat due to the warmth. The moral of the story is that kindness and persuasion are often more effective than force.

edueuphoria.com

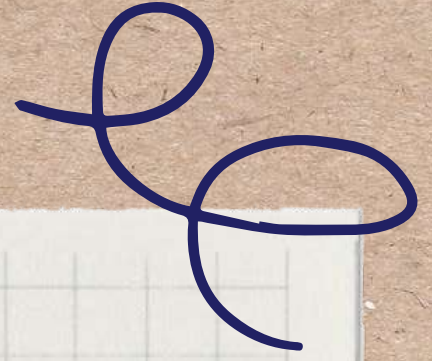

The Farmer and the Stork

In this tale, a farmer invites a stork over for dinner, but serves the meal in a shallow dish, making it difficult for the stork to eat. The farmer laughs at the stork, but later visits the stork and is served a meal in a tall jar, which the stork can easily reach. The moral of the story is to treat others how you would like to be treated.

edueuphoria.com

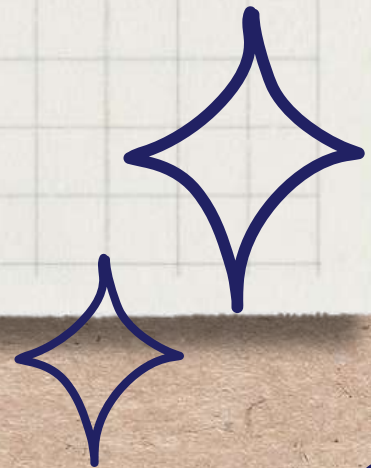

The Boy and the Filberts

In this fable, a boy shakes a tree to make filberts fall, but shakes it too hard, causing more than he can eat to fall to the ground. He tries to pick up all the filberts, but can't carry them all and ends up losing them. The moral of the story is not to be greedy and take more than you need.

edueuphoria.com

The Crow and the Pitcher

In this story, a thirsty crow comes across a pitcher with water in it, but the water level is too low for the crow to drink. The crow comes up with a clever solution and drops pebbles into the pitcher until the water level rises enough for it to drink. The moral of the story is that perseverance can overcome obstacles.

edueuphoria.com

